

Autobiography of Alice Maude Lunt Matheson

I was born in Cedar City, Utah on December 18, 1875. My father, Henry Lunt, was born at Mickley Hall, Cheshire, England July 20th, 1824. Mother, Mary Ann Wilson Lunt, was born in Carlisle, England, on January 19, 1834.

Father married three other wives: Ellen Whittaker first, Mother second, Ann Gower third, and Sarah Lunt of Nephi, Utah fourth. Aunt Ellen was never blessed with a family of her own, each of the other wives had eight children.

Mother's children, all of whom were born and raised and made their homes in Cedar City, each having families and comfortable homes:

Henrietta Lunt Jones, born November 12, 1858

Ellen Eva Lunt Jones, born February 7, 1861

Henry Whittaker Lunt, born January 25, 1863

Randle Wilson Lunt, born November 8, 1864

William Wilson Lunt, born July 18, 1867

Florence Lunt Webster, born January 20, 1870

Violet Lunt Urie, born August 10, 1873

Alice Maude Lunt Matheson, born December 18, 1875.

Mine was a happy childhood. The hardships of pioneer life were over, orchards which had been planted 10 and 12 years before I was born were now bearing fruit in abundance, shade trees were spreading their branches making a welcome shade from the hot sun in summer, native currant bushes which had been planted along the dividing lines and fences of city lots furnished fruit for both birds and any one wishing to gather it, also making shady nooks for our playhouses, where we would have our families of dolls, consisting of father, mother and 5 or 6 children. Violet and myself with our nearest playmates, Edith and Fan Walker and Nancy Chatterley would meet at each others chosen secluded nook and hold "Primary Conference" with all our families in attendance.

For diversion we would wade in the irrigating ditches, swing from the branches of trees or play hide-and-go-seek and in the evening more of the neighbor children would gather in the street for a game of run sheep run or steal sticks. As I take a retrospective view of my early childhood home it seems a veritable heaven on earth.

Father was very thrifty and industrious and took pride in keeping the surroundings clean and neat, so also was mother in the home, their motto being, "A place for everything and everything in its place". Father having to divide his time and attention with his other families and the office of Bishop, the care and training of we children devolved upon Mother in a great measure, but he would call the family together in the evening after the chores were done and supper over when he would select some of his favorite hymns and all would join in the singing, after which there would be family prayer.

The song that impressed me most was the following:

"To know and serve the Lord
Our Maker and our friend
To search each day His Holy Word
And contemplate our end.
To praise his matchless love
Which fills our hearts with grace
To adore and love Him all our days
And dwell with Him in peace."

Aunt Ellen being Telegraph Operator, we were called on to deliver messages, run errands, etc. The office occupied a corner of the living room or "Parlour" where father would take the guests to warm before an open grate in the cold weather after traveling either by their own buggy and team or by the stage coach which also stayed long enough to exchange horses and driver when it would go on its way south or north carrying the U.S. mail and often passengers from all parts of the world, the Silver Reef mine being one of the attractions in those days.

It was a great opportunity for we children to meet people and learn many things about the different countries, their modes of living and customs other than from our school books.

I remember an old man from Russia staying at our place for some time. He carried a green umbrella and how queer we thought that he was both action and speech, not realizing that he would think the same of us.

I have a mental picture of the old home with its spacious yard in which the stage coach would turn around after leaving the drive way in order to be ready for the fresh team to take it on the next lap of the journey. We knew all the horses names, also the drivers who seemed to feel as much at home as if belonging to the family.

On the north of the driveway and yard above mentioned, was an apple orchard, on the east the large barn and yard, stables for the horses, then the stock yard and "chaff house", warm sheds for the cows, there was the granary, etc, and on the south a variety of fruit trees, currant bushes, vegetable garden, etc.

A happy self satisfied feeling it was to be playing out in the yard or on the shed or outbuilding on an early spring evening and see a bright fire burning in the kitchen thru the open door, Mother preparing the evening meal or if it was over, we would play in the twilight until called in to prepare for bed.

There would be occasional trips to Parowan, Kanarra, and other towns to attend Primary Conference. Aunt Sarah Chatterly would take a wagon load of children, having practiced songs, speeches, etc for the occasion, it would take all day and sometimes two, to make the trip. On one occasion Aunt Sarah took her little two year old girl along and left her with a young girl at a friends home in Parowan while she attended conference. The child having a cough, the girl was instructed to give her some medicine, but administered an overdose which resulted in her death. Upon her mothers return the child was apparently asleep and as she attempted to awaken her to prepare for the homeward trip, she discovered that she was dead.

Instead of complaining and feeling rebellious as many would to suffer such a loss while in the service of the Lord, Aunt Sarah said, "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord". Showing what a noble character we had in Aunt Sarah for our Primary teacher.

When about seven years old I took my first trip over the mountain where a number of people went every summer to engage in the dairy business, taking nearly all the cows belonging to the town people. My oldest sister and her husband were at a ranch in rather an isolated part of the country and it was not unusual for bear to come to the ranch in quest of a young calf, of which there would be from 30 to 40, but which were fastened in a pen at night to protect them from the invaders, but on several occasions were successful in killing if not carrying off one.

One night we heard an awful bellowing from the cows in the corral and we knew a bear was near, the men folks being away that night, Mother got up, took a lamp in her hand and started toward the corral. I followed her. She had heard that wild animals were afraid of a light and it proved to be the case as old Bruin went shambling off in the timber and the calves were safe for another night.

The cows were turned out to pasture during the day which would necessitate the gathering in of the herd for milking in the evening when the clanging of the pails would be heard together with the bawling of the calves eager for their supper.

I would help keep the swine from the tubs of milk until the milkers were all thru, when it would be carried to the milk house and strained into pans, rows of them placed on shelves on all sides of the milk house room where they would stand until the cream raised, when it would be skimmed and churned, the butter molded into 2 lb. rolls and preserved in brine or packed in jars and cans for winter use.

When a good supply of butter was made, only enough milk would be kept out for immediate use and the rest made into cheese. When about 100 were made it would be time to move to town. The cheese would be packed in straw which would be brought for the purpose in a double bed wagon, another with household goods, pans, buckets, tubs, etc., and perched high on the load we would start for town. We would overtake some of the boys who had started out early in the morning driving cows, calves and hogs which were loath to leave a nice shady place where they could feast on grass, roots, acorns, etc. and run to a long trough filled with milk. It would require the patience of an animal trainer to get them assembled together and on the road until the top of the mountain was reached, where there would be no alternative only to keep on the dug-way and the sometimes precipitous descents, until the foothills were reached and what a relief to be on level ground and go sailing along into town, where I was glad to be once more when it would be harvest time, the gathering and storing of apples, cooking for the threshers, and we children watching the horses as they furnished the power for the machinery, playing in the grain bins, and after a winter of school, wading in the snow - sliding, skating, laughing, shouting, we were glad again for the lovely spring.

There is always something to anticipate and look forward to in the different seasons, even the spring and summer in all its glory would lose its charm if we experienced no other. There would be the May walks into the hills and canyon, or "Squaw Cave", where on our way we would gather wild flowers the crown our "May Queen". Then later on some of the family would move on the mountain again and I would be as eager to go as tho it was my first trip. We would escape the hot weather in the valley, go horse back riding and later in the summer gather berries. And when Mother was there she would take me with her to gather herbs, also ferns and flowers which we would press and decorate our home in town. Often neighbors from other ranches would get together for a social hour. There were no restrictions on the killing of deer or grouse and we would often see some one coming thru the timber with one or the other tied to their saddle.

Our happy family life was not to continue forever. Owing to a Bill which was passed in the U.S. Senate in 1891, Father was compelled to either evade the officers or abandon all but his first wife, so he chose the former, until he could make arrangements to take his young wife Sarah and her four small children to Mexico. In the meantime the U.S. Deputy Marshalls would make frequent visits, stopping at our place, but Father would not be there. On several occasions however, he would not be aware of their arrival into the City until someone would see them driving in the yard. Father would slip out the back door and thru the lot to Br. Webster's (who was also evading arrest) and together they would go in "hiding". Father was never arrested.

To avoid being subpoenaed as a witness against him, Mother also left home for a few months taking the little girls with her, but that was fun for us as we didn't realize what it was all about. We left for Fillmore in a covered wagon, the canvas all tied down with our brother Will, as the driver, sitting out in front on the spring seat. As we were leaving town we heard some one say, "Hello Will, where are you going?" And he replied, "Over to Milford for freight." We were several days on the road and on arriving at our destination, were welcomed by the Trimble family, friends of mother's, where we rented a room. Being in the spring, the blossoms out, we were glad to roam around and it wasn't long until we were in the orchard counting the robins nests and exploring our new surroundings. It was like a holiday for us and little did we realize the sacrifice our parents were making. We returned home the following autumn in time for school.

The next winter Mother was called to labor in the St. George Temple, and I went with her attending school there. Randle came down to be married in December and we returned home with he and his wife to spend Christmas Holidays, arriving in Cedar on my birthday 18 Dec. 1885 and a big reception and wedding feast had been prepared for the newly weds. I expected to return to St. George where I had made so many friends, but to my great disappointment I was left behind to live with Henry and Rose while Violet and Florence returned with Mother. I have always considered that the greatest disappointment of my childhood. I had longed for the companionship of Violet during my stay in St. George and then to see her go without me it was almost more than I could bear, but I became attached to Harry, then a baby a few months old and he to me and have always had a warm spot in my heart for him. Henry and Rose were good and kind to me, but no one quite takes the place of Mother, who understands us and has the affection and sympathy one craves when in trouble, which would sometimes seem trivial to others. Father and Ellen took a trip to England and soon after their return preparations were made for them to move to Mexico, Father with his wife Sarah and children left first, Aunt Annie and 5 children some months later (the three older ones being married, Jane, Jamima and Roselia).

The old home which had been the "Hotel" or the Big House was sold and Mother with Will, Florence, Violet and myself moved to the home previously occupied by Aunt Annie and her family on the opposite side of the street, 1st East, and which had been Mother's home some years before where Florence, Violet and I were born, now she was to occupy it again. She had taught school and paid for the building of an addition to it. Aunt Ellen remained to attend to the business transactions and pack her belongings, after which she too went to join Father, who needed her as she had to read to him and did much of his writing and corresponding since he had had the misfortune of partially losing his eyesight. Florence was now the Telegraph Operator and the Office was moved to our other home.

I was thirteen now and learning telegraphy delivering messages, helping care for brothers and sisters, children, going to school and in the summer living with one of the brothers and family at a ranch on the mountain, helping with the milking and dairy work; which hindered my practicing telegraphy, but when Florence married, it was necessary for me to stay more strictly to business. Violet was also practicing but the household duties occupied most of her time. Mother being called to wait on the sick from time to time and it fell my lot to take the responsibility of the office business with Florence assistance, who was still manager, and who was now living in a home of her own, but near enough to help in an emergency, as I was far from being as efficient an operator as she and the others. Especially "Salt Lake" would get angry at me and say "get Florence".

Will was married the following year, 1889, and he and his wife occupied part of the old home, while a new house was being built for Mother and where the Office was moved when sufficiently finished but not quite completed. It was now Violet's turn to leave us in 1892, to go to a home of her own, which left Mother and myself in our new one.

I was now 16 and appointed Manager. While Father was on a visit from Mexico he gave me the following Patriarchal blessing:

Dated Cedar City, Iron Co., Utah, June 22, 1893:

A blessing by Henry Lunt, Patriarch, upon the head of Alice Maude daughter of Henry and Mary Anne Wilson Lunt, born December 18, 1875, Cedar City, Utah.

My beloved daughter, Maude, in the name of the Lord, Jesus Christ, I place my hands upon your head and seal upon thee a Patriarchal or fathers blessing, and inasmuch as thou wilt give thy heart unto the Lord in thy young and tender years with a desire to keep all His Holy commandments and follow the counsels of thy Mother and be good and kind to her, thou shalt realize the fulfillment thereof to the joy and satisfaction of thy heart, for thou art a daughter of Zion and greatly favored of the Lord in being born under the new and everlasting covenant in this great dispensation of the fulness of times of the Royal House of Israel and the Blood of Ephriam.

Satan will try and lead thee in by and forbidden paths, it is therefor necessary that thou shouldst live humble before the Lord and give heed to the still small whisperings of the Holy spirit and thou shalt be preserved from every snare of the evil one and be filled with wisdom and have great faith in the Lord and become a bright and shining light among the daughters of Zion and be greatly beloved and respected by them.

The Lord will provide for thee a righteous man for thy husband if thou wilt put thy trust in Him. Thou shalt become a mother in Israel and have sons and daughters and teach them to walk in the ways of the Lord and thy old age they shall gather around thee to greatly comfort and bless thee. Holy angels shall visit thee and communicate unto thee the names of many of thy progenitors for whom thou shalt do a work of redemption in the Temple of the Lord.

Thou shalt have peace and plenty and good order in thy habitation and many of thy sisters in the church will seek unto thee for council for thou wilt become a woman of renown and a Prophetess.

In the absence of thy husband when thy children are sick, thou shalt lay hands upon them and they will be healed by the prayer of faith. Thy name is written in the Lambs book of life and thy guardian angel watcheth over thee, the Lord loveth thee and if thou wilt observe the words of this blessing thou shalt be crowned a queen and Priestess to thy husband and reign in connection with him over a kingdom and dominion in celestial glory.

I seal all these blessings upon thy head with the gift of Eternal life in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

A very wonderful blessing and should have given more thought and consideration but being at the age when a girl thinks there is time in the future for the more serious things of life, I went on with my daily duties of delivering messages, helping keep the house in order, attending choir and concert practices, making out reports - going to Sunday School and meetings, and playing the organ to accompany Randle on the violin, who furnished the music for the dances which were held in the new Opera House, located on the Ahlstrom property on upper 1st East. The old social hall being abandoned for a time.

Mother bring a practical nurse and midwife was kept busy, what with her own family and others who desired her services, and would be called out all hours of the night and would not always have the privilege of riding in a buggy to her destination, but would walk very often to the opposite side of town and come home tired out. In case of confinement she would act as doctor and nurse, making daily trips to the patient for 10 or 12 days and receive the sum of $3.00 for her services. My salary being $25.00 per month, $10 in cash and $10 order on the Tithing office. My brothers farmed the land owned by Mother which furnished us with flour, potatoes, etc., we had our cow, which I milked and cared for we usually had a fat hog to kill in the fall, so didn't need to buy much produce and the Tithing orders were exchanged for lumber to enlarge our house which consisted of three rooms, bedroom, kitchen and living room, which also served as office.

Mother liked to have the children come and wanted more room to have family reunions and social gatherings, but as she had told me, she didn't want to live alone and that when I married she hoped it would be to a man who would be willing to come and live with us and that it was to be our home. My brother, Henry, suggested that we wait and let him help build the addition. At this time, Randles wife, Kate, with her three children, Netti, Eva, and Walter came to live with us during the winter as their home was located 6 miles north of town - south of Hyrum Jones' home in Enoch, and Randle being away part of the time, Mother didn't want them to be alone. The following May a baby girl was born, named for the month but spelled "Mae". Mother waited on the mother and babe - and we both had enough to keep us busy, as there was no hired girl to do the washing, ironing, preparing of meals, etc., children to care for, office work to do, delivering of messages waiting on customers. But I was happy and was never too tired to miss a dance, or party or practice - or to prepare garden between times.

In October, 1895, before my 19th birthday, I took my first trip to Salt Lake City, Florence taking care of the office for me. A number of people were going from Cedar to Attend the great Eisteddfod or worlds musical contest to be held in the Tabernacle, among the number Joseph Casslett, our choir leader, his Bro. Garner, Ada Wood, Eupharnia Hunter and many others. We left home at 6 am in white top buggies and carriages, arriving in Milford at 6 pm, stayed at a hotel and boarded the train the next morning. I was afraid to go to sleep for fear the train would leave me, and kept asking Eupharnia if it was time to dress, finally I got up and dressed and it was 2 o'clock, so waited until the others began to stir.

We arrived in Salt Lake at 6 that evening, taking two days to make the trip from Cedar. When Father made his annual trips to Salt Lake it would take 3 weeks by team of horses all the way and back. I stayed at Ashtons down by the railroad tracks, so there was no sleep for me that night, not being used to the noise.

The next day I went to my sisters, Jane Burt, where I made my home for a month and had a real vacation. I sent home for a recommend to the Temple and was taken thru along with Jane, as visitors. I never will forget the beauty of it and the quiet heavenly influence that prevailed and what a contrast to the noise and hum-drum of the City as we came out. On the train going up I met Anthony Godbe, the operator from Bullionville, Nevada, whom I had become acquainted with "over the wire" but had never seen - he was a typical bachelor and rather deaf- very gentlemanly and attentive, but not nearly so interesting to talk to as when several hundred miles away, he however didn't seem to be greatly disappointed and would have treated me royally in the City had I given him any encouragement, but having been taught that it was improper to accept favors from men unless very near dear friends, I felt it my duty to refuse his invitations. He called to see me and we met at the telegraph office and before I reached home, Mother had received the word that I was being entertained by Mr. Godbe, which was not very consoling to her. His father had left our Church, and organized what was called the Godbeites - hence her aversion to my being on friendly terms with him.

I would call in at the Telegraph Office [in Salt Lake] and have a chat with Florence at home and everything seemed to be going smoothly, while I was having the time of my young life, little realizing I was causing any anxiety on Mothers part. Jane made me a dress with "Leg o mutton" sleeves", which were just coming in style. I bought a felt sailor hat with a stiff rim and bell shaped crown with veil to match and a feather boa round my neck. I looked real "city-fied" on my return home, my hair in the latest style, waved on each side braided in one strand and doubled up and tied with a bow of ribbon in the back just under the rim of my hat. As I walked up the aisle to take my seat in the choir I could feel everyone looking at me. I had also purchased some powder and a puff, but was afraid to put any on for fear it would show and cover up my freckles and wouldn't look natural. Up to this time about the only girl in town that used powder or any kind of make up was Ada Wood, now it is a rare thing to find one without it.

At a dance not long after I returned home, I saw a young man who was a stranger to me, but who had come to town soon after I left. He was not dancing and seemed rather retiring, good looking with dark, wavy hair. I was interested in him, rather liked his appearance and altho we saw each other at dances and social parties, we were never formally introduced.

I learned that his name was Dan Matheson, the son of the miller, Alex Matheson, Sen. He had been working in a printing office in Salt Lake and had come on a visit to his parents who had moved from Parowan and were living in the house by the mill. His two younger brothers, Renz and Owen were with them and attending school in Cedar.

Instead of returning to Salt Lake as he intended doing, his Father bought for him a half interest in the Iron Co. Record - he and Charles Wilkinson being the Editors of that paper.

These two young editors secured a team and buggy one Sunday afternoon (very likely hired it from the livery kept by Andrew Corry) and invited two young ladies to take a ride, which was the beginning of a romance. The Record Office was located in the East part of the Knell

Block over the Drug Store, which could be plainly seen from my office and the editors, at least one of them, also became interested in the location of the Telegraph Office and found it just as near and convenient to go thru the avenue that connected Main Street with 1st East and which had been opened principally for the convenience of business men, coming to the Office and people going over in town. He would call in the evenings on very important business and accompany me to Choir practice, he also being a new member and finally, scarcely an evening passed without our being together, except while he was out of town, after dissolving partnership with Mr. Wilkinson, but we would write love letters, compose poetry for each other and wish for the time when we would never be separated.

At last we were engaged, a ring slipped on my finger and not long after preparations were made for a trip to St. George, which was also made by team and wagon. We left Cedar Sunday morning, April 25, 1897, accompanied by Dan's father and my mother - staying at Leeds that same night, on to St. George the next day, spent the evening visiting friends and on Tuesday morning April 27, 1897 we were married in the Temple by Pres. David H. Cannon. It was my first visit to St. George since spending such a happy 4 months 11 years before, but this time the town was bedecked with flowers and I felt that I had been transported into heaven. An April shower added to the beauty of it as all the trees, grass and flowers were sparkling in the sunshine which followed. That same evening we drove back to Leeds and on to Cedar the next day, where a wedding feast was ready, having been prepared by dear sisters, Florence, Violet, Henrietta and Eva. The Brass Band came to serenade which we considered an honor from such a distinguished group.

A few months previous to this Mother had written in my autograph album the following lines: To Alice Maude on her 21st birthday:

"The river of time to thee has been
A placid peaceful stream
For thy life has been a happy one,
A sweet, poetic dream.
While in the future gliding on
With the chosen of thy heart
May you land upon the Golden Shore
Never more to part."

The loving wish of Mother

I had been happy and now there was someone else to share that happiness, but the peaceful, placid stream sometimes has an undercurrent, which without any warning capsizes the little raft which seems so safe and close to shore.

And we little realized when we were looking forward to the second real event of our lives to take place that we were to have our first great disappointment. The 11th of March had arrived. Mother was on duty as the attendant nurse and everything was apparently normal when Mother said with a concern which she tried to hide, "Dan, you had better go for Doctor Forrester." In all her experience and success as a midwife she was facing a difficulty she had never experienced. The suspense before the arrival of the Dr. was almost unbearable for her and he seemed to take his time.

In the meantime Violet appeared on the scene full of sympathy, and consolation who would have considered it a great privilege herself, she was trying to comfort me with the fact that I would have reward for all the suffering and my heart went out to her when I told her if ever I had twins she should have one of them. There was no anesthetic administered but rousing from a semi-consciousness and what seemed to be a black abyss, instead of hearing the welcome cry of a new born babe, there was a hushed and solemn silence, and the spirit of the little girl had taken its flight to whence it had come.

We had the sympathy of every one. Dr. Seymour B. Young, who was in attendance at Conference soon after, came to our home and gave me a wonderful blessing, in which he promised that I would be doubly blessed and when the twins came Dec. 27, 1898, we realized the significance of it. Violet came in all excited and exclaimed, "I know why there are two because one is mine."

They were very tiny weak little lambs and it being the coldest night of the winter, they needed watching every minute. Violet faithfully listening for the tiny faint breath all night long. Florence having increased family cares of her own, the services of an operator, a young girl from St. George, was secured and when I heard her from the next room explaining to the Supt. that I had twin girls, the wires seemed to fairly ring when he replied, "Great Scott."

Maude's and Dan's twins were the talk of the town and people came to see them in as many numbers as one would see at a menagerie. I felt as much at ease with so much curiosity as a caged animal whose young are attracting attention. Violet came over every day to assist in the caring of the wee ones and when they were about 3 weeks old, Mother having been called away one morning, we undertook to give them their bath. I said, if you will bathe the little one, I will the big one. The little one being 4 1/2 pounds and the big one 6.

I had selected Violet for a name and their father had the romantic name of Ianthe, so when the two girls came they each had a name, and oh what comments and suggestions were offered, but the names were not changed and were no more different than were the babies, who also were the subject for many different opinions, one would say "This one looks like the Lunts and that one the Mathesons" and the next person would say the opposite. They were just as different in disposition as in looks and names, but the joy and satisfaction those two babies did bring never will be forgotten. Mother loved them as her very own and was their best friend, always ready and willing to come for them when other duties took my attention. She would sing lullabies and Mother Goose rhymes to them and tell them stories and soon they were singing themselves.

When they were 2 years and 8 months old a baby brother came to stay with us, Aug. 24, 1901. This time Mother in attendance, no Doctor was needed and every body happy. Grandpa Matheson had made a cradle for the twins and now they were rocking their big baby brother in it, who weighed as much as the two did at birth, he [Duayne] was a handsome fellow with brown hair. Dan was able to attend to the office, with the occasional assistance of Florence and myself. Violet still on hand to help in any way she could. Mother faithful to her trust as nurse. My promise to Violet concerning the twins, "If ever I had any" had never been kept, it was so much easier to imagine giving one away especially when it was doubtful in my mind that I ever would, than when it became a reality, so they both stayed with us and Violet adopted a sweet little 8 month old girl, whose Mother brought her from Salt Lake City to Lund where John and Violet met her and if ever there were proud, happy parents, they were. She was 4 months younger than the twins and a lovely, healthy bright child.

Violet was a devoted mother, giving Rita every attention and care. They would bring her over and what a jolly time we would have with the three little girls. She was learning to stand alone and say a few words when she took suddenly ill with fever, notwithstanding she had the very best care, and in spite of the skill of Dr. Middleton and others, serious complications developed and it was a terrible trial for them to have to give her up when death came to her relief.

Violet had all the qualifications of an ideal mother and yet she must be deprived of children, her heart fairly ached in her bereavement and when Edgar Clark came down sometime after from Parowan to find homes for his Brother's orphaned children, he placed two of them with Uncle John and Aunt Violet. Ramona, about 6 and Daniel 4, where they found a good home and devoted parents. There wasn't so much time now for her to come over and help us. Mother was getting rather feeble, cataracts developing on both eyes. Dan away from home at the mines, most of the time, which left me with enough to keep my time well occupied. Previous to this, however, an addition had been built, a private room for Mother finished, a large room, bathroom, etc. unfinished but inhabitable which made it much more convenient. Two of Dan's cousins were boarding with us, Henry Matheson, who was attending school and his sister, Maggie, clerking in Page and Brackens store.

On the 23rd of October of this same year, 1903, Dr. Middleeson was called to the house, Papa, as the twins and Duayne called their father, was out at the mines, and Randle who lived across the Ave. was brought in to service to go for the Dr. Mother acting as nurse again. The lusty cry of another boy was heard the next morning and this time it was necessary to secure the services of Mrs. Whitney, an old time operator of Parowan to come and take charge of the office, my niece, Sadie Jones, assisting with the housework, but only for a few days. When Albert was two weeks old, I made out the last report of the Telegraph Office. The Bell Telephone Co. was building their line thru the country and installed an office in Cedar which took most of the business. The old telegraph office was abandoned after being in the Lunt family since it was first established in 1863 and the line later used by the Southern Utah Telephone Co.

Altho it was like parting with an old friend or friends (as we telegraph operators were like one big family) it was also a great relief to have that much less responsibility, as four children under the age of 5 years require some little care. But we would miss the direct contact with the different towns of Utah as well as Pioche, Nev. and the many pleasant conversations with the different operators, especially Frances Thompson of Scipio (who I had practiced with when a beginner and who became an intimate friend, altho we never met in person, our spirits were congenial and we loved each other). Also Mamie Adams in Parowan. We three would chat for hours (after hours). Mamie became one of the best educated women in the U.S.A., received several degrees from Universities, traveled thru Europe, taught in several of the prominent schools in different states, but died in California at the age of 54, after suffering from both physical and mental ailments. She married rather late in life and raised 2 children.

The last I heard from Frances, she was in a hospital and may also have passed from this life, but perhaps we will all meet again and revive the old Morse code which meant so much to us.

A year before the birth of our second son, 1902, we received the sad news of our dearly beloved and faraway father. He had been able to write to Mother occasionally and Aunt Ellen kept us posted as to his condition as he had suffered with cancer on his face for some time and was reconciled, as we all were to his being relieved, but it did seem hard after pioneering both this part of Southern Utah and living such an active and useful life to suffer as he did and die away off in Mexico.

At this time Mother was suffering with cataracts on both of her eyes. It would be necessary for her to go to Salt Lake City and have an operation performed, but the Dr. had told her when she made a trip to the city to have her eyes examined that she would have to come back home and patiently wait until she was entirely blind, which she did, before he could do anything for her. Henrietta accompanied her back to the City where the operation performed by Dr. Snow was successful and on her return 5 weeks later, there was great rejoicing. She hadn't seen anything for several months and on reaching the street leading to our home, she asked to have the bandages removed from her eyes and she beheld the familiar scene and children and grandchildren waiting to meet her. She was overjoyed. Then all formed in line and passed before her and altho the younger ones had grown considerable since she last saw them, she knew them all.

Dear, patient Mother who had been a great reader and lover of books and had sat for hours with her own thoughts, but never idle even when blind would knit, and entertain the twins and they in turn entertain her, by telling all they knew and more too, hold the baby or rock him to sleep, the twins would lead her around and do all they could to help pass the time while I was too busy with other duties to read to her. Now she was happy in the thot that she would be able to read which she did after waiting for some time for her reading glasses.

While she was away, Dan was also out of town most of the time and I was anxious to have the house and yards looking clean and neat for her return. Duayne was almost too heavy for me to carry, but good natured and the three children would play and the twins help all they could so we managed fine and everybody happy.

After the removal of the telegraph instruments the room was repapered and made into a nice bedroom and when our third boy came, May 22, 1906, I occupied for the first time a private room. Mrs. B a licensed midwife and Doctor were in attendance, Grandma Matheson was also staying at our house for a short visit; Mother took care of the children and myself in the absence of the nurse who made daily visits, Dan was chief cook served my meals and not having the care of the office, we managed nicely. It was Dan's turn to select a name for the new baby as I had named Albert while his father was away. Charles R. Mabey was a teacher in the Branch Normal School [College] at that time and a personal friend of ours and when Dan came to my bedside and said he would like to name the baby Mabey, I wouldn't have objected had it been Moses - notwithstanding the fact that we should have given it more serious consideration. Bro. Mabey came to the home and gave him a blessing and his name. [Charles R. Mabey went on to be Governor of Utah from 1921 to 1925.]

He was also a big fine good natured baby and when but only a few weeks old, Samuel Webster came and asked me if I would nurse and care for a baby boy the same age, while his wife was in the hospital for an operation. Of course I consented, but soon found out all babies are not alike. The one that makes the most fuss and noise gets the most attention which was the case with the Webster baby. Poor Dan walked the floor with it and the little brat nearly starved our own. He acted like a dogie lamb which never knows when it has had enough. Dear little Mabey took sick and as I was bathing him one morning he acted very strange and we sent for Aunt Charlotte Walker. She gave him some medicine which revived him and said, "Why that baby was about to have a convulsion. You should give up the other baby and devote your entire attention to him", which we did and the father very reluctantly took him away.

He asked what the bill was and said we had not set any particular price and that we would leave it with him to pay what he thot it had been worth to him; After some hesitation he said, "Well, I'm very much obliged" and left. I fancy I hear the children who may read this say, no wonder father and mother were always poor, if that is a sample of their business ability.

If it had been a case of charity all well and good, but Mr. Webster would have paid no doubt, if we had made a definite charge, but it was a lesson to me that one cannot always trust to a person's honor and sense of appreciation in such matters.

Very early one morning, July 24, 1906, soon after this episode, my dear brother Randle came to the house saying his wife, Kate, was very sick at a ranch in the Canyon and had come to town for help. I made up a bundle of little clothes which he said may be needed. We waited anxiously for news from them after a Doctor, Kate's mother, Mrs. Bell and others had gone, and it was certainly a great shock to us when a messenger brought the sad news that Kate had given birth prematurely to twin boys after which she also passed away, the result of a shock from lightening the evening before.

Randle had taken the family to the mountains to spend a few weeks while he hauled lumber for a new house his wife was so very anxious to have built north of the old one, previously occupied by Mother and we younger children, later by Will and family and now owned by Randle and was just across the Ave. from our present home. Naturally, we took the children to our home while theirs was being prepared for the mother and babies, preparations were to be made for the funeral, clothing for the children made ready, meals and the usual routine of work to be done in addition but there were many friends and neighbors to offer assistance - as is usually the case in all communities, at such times, especially in Utah.

Dan not having steady work in Cedar had been helping his brother Will, in Parowan and as Mother thought it best to go and oversee Randle's household and be a comfort to him, we decided to move to Parowan where we rented the old McGregor place a block north of Grandma Matheson's home. Will was running the Parowan Flour Mill and Dan assisted him until Will left for Beaver to take charge of the mill there. In the meantime Renz and Danna were married and having bought the house in which we were living they were anxious to occupy it. While Dan was busy at the mill, I went "house hunting", and failing to find a suitable place, Grandma Matheson came to our rescue and in her big-hearted way offered to share her home with us. As soon as Danna heard of this and while I was cleaning and making ready a little room where we could move our stove and kitchen utensils she took broom and mop stick and with the help of a hired girl and others, without first consulting us, proceeded to dismantle everything in our or rather "her" house and upon going there to pack up and make preparations to move and clean up the house, I found curtains, pictures, furniture, heating stove, etc. piled in a disorderly fashion out on the front porch and the carpets were being taken up and house cleaning was in full swing. I was too indignant and hurt to tell them what I thought of such presumption, but proceeded to carry dishes, etc. up to Grandma's, where we stayed for a month. In the meantime Will offered us his house and in Oct. we moved there - Will and family moving to Beaver.

On Nov. 8, 1908 our 4th son was born. Dr. Clarence Clark in attendance with Sister Ellen Davenport as nurse, and Celeste Pendleton our hired girl and an excellent one she was. Mother was also there on a visit, but was now rather feeble and not able to take any responsibilities. She returned to Cedar but was lonely and anxious for us to go back home. Randle had married again, Violet was in Salt Lake City, Florence was sick, and neither Henrietta or Eva able to take care of her.

We named our baby boy William, his Uncle Simon blessing him and giving him the name. After Dan leaving the mill he was employed by the telephone co. and while doing some repairing the lightning struck the pole on which he was working causing him to fall, breaking his foot. While still too disabled to work, we moved back to Cedar which was a satisfaction to us all.

I realized I should never have left Mother, but she had said "never mind me, do what is best for yourselves." Dear sister Florence was gradually failing and it was the greatest trial for Mother and us all to see her getting worse every day and when she passed away on Dec. 14, 1910, it was the first death to occur in Mother's family, a great sorrow in her declining years and causing her to fail in health more rapidly. In 4 months after Florence's death, she passed away at the age of 76.

Dear Mother who had been so good and kind to us was gone, and how we did miss her. One is never ready to part with their Mother and her last illness was a great shock to me as it hadn't seemed to have occurred to me that i would not always have her with me. She was only confined to her room a few weeks during which time the sisters, Henrietta, Eva, Violet also the brothers, Henry, Randle and Will assisted in waiting on her and making her comfortable as possible. The last words she spoke were to the effect that she wanted us to be at peace with each other and not to quarrel - she had always been a peace maker herself and avoided contention and strife. (Read the brief sketch of her life by myself).

While we were in Parowan Randle sold his home and bought a farm 5 miles north of town in the Union field, his wife, Nancy, having 3 young boys and two girls and he having 5 girls and one boy at home, each of whom were old enough to have minds of their own and each family having different home training previous to their attempt at living together, it is easy to understand why they were unable to make a success of their new environment, as contention and unhappiness resulted and Nancy went back to her home leaving Randle at the farm.

In the meantime, the Matheson brothers had bought 600 acres of land from the state located 2 miles north west of the Union field and as our 4 boys were now getting old enough to want to be busy at something, their father's health being poor and no steady work in town, Randle and his girls being discontented on the farm, we decided to exchange our home for the farm, moving on July 11th, 1910.

The house was in an unfinished condition consisting of one large room and attic, and a lumber kitchen, but the fences, corrals, stables, etc. were substantial and 13 acres alfalfa, 3 acres in grain, the remaining 24 acres unbroken brush land - a flowing well some distance from the house but near the corral, emptied into a wooden tank and out into a pond and the facilities looked very promising for our making a success, notwithstanding the fact that we had only one cow and a calf, a few chickens and an old horse and wagon which had been donated to us , but Dan's brothers, Will, Renz and Owen, who were also making an effort to establish themselves on the land above mentioned, were willing to help by exchanging work, loan a horse or machinery as the case required. Dan's health was much improved and we were all happy and hopeful and our friends told us we would be independent in 5 years.

Our problem now was where to send the children to school, being 3 miles from Enoch and 5 from Cedar, we tried the plan of getting books and studying at home, which was not very satisfactory, later a school wagon was fitted up to transport the children from the valley to Enoch where a one room school was held. A good portion of the time our twins, Violet and Ianthe, and the two boys, Duayne and Albert, walked, taking a short cut thru the brush land, following an old road which had been abandoned, carrying their lunch consisting much of the time of bread and molasses, but they would come home in the evening with good credit marks and apparently none the worse off for their meager fare, but as I look back I think it was an imposition on the children to require them to make sacrifices and deprive them of advantages, but we didn't seem to realize then that they were making them, and perhaps they did not.

They would bring rocks of unusual color or shape, and wild flowers they had found on their way. Dear little Mabey and William would run to meet them and they would all have a jolly time playing in the big stock yard and at threshing time enjoy the excitement of the occasion. Occasionally we would all go over to the "other place", join with Will's and Owen's families in singing and playing games, going back home in the moon light, tired and sleepy but happy and contented.

Grandpa and Grandma Matheson [Dan's parents, Alexander Matheson and Lydia Evans Matheson] had moved back to their old home in Parowan and Grandma's health was failing very fast. She had become bed-fast and at her request I went up when I could to nurse her and keep house for Grandpa, the last time staying about 3 weeks, leaving Dan and the children to get along the best way they could. Grandma had suffered for years with asthma, and had been compelled to rest or sleep in an almost sitting posture, but during her last illness was able to be down and it was a relief to see her apparently at ease, but we could see she was getting weaker every day. On the day of her death, May 30, 1912, she seemed to be sleeping peacefully and while I had ran across the street on an errand leaving Grandpa to watch her, I heard him call to me and before I could return, she had passed away, gone to the land of peace and rest where the ills and pains of the flesh would be felt no more - gone to receive the reward that would be justly due a mother who had raised 9 sons, 7 of whom had grown to manhood and who were all honorable citizens and who were all in attendance at her funeral. [One son died when only one year old and another died when only one month old]

During the winter of 1912-13 the twins were studying the 7th and 9th grades in school with Hyrum Jones as teacher and preparing to graduate from the 8th grade in the spring. In March we had a suspicious case of scarlet fever in the home and rather than keep the girls from school, we fumigated their clothes and sent them over to Enoch where they were staying with Aunt Mary Alice Jones who proffered to keep them until it was safe for them to come home. Duayne and Albert remaining at home.

During the night of March 19, 1913, I informed Dan that it would be necessary for him to take me to Cedar altho we had not anticipated going for two more weeks. Fortunately dear little Mabey was better and no signs of scarlet fever had developed, but during the night Duayne was sick and it was a trial to have to leave the four little boys alone. I never will forget driving up the road in an open buggy, the snow falling fast. I was all wrapped up and Dan was urging the pony team along as fast as they could go. We were 45 minutes on the road a distance of 5 miles.

I had engaged Josephine Walker Isbell to care for me and she resented being disturbed in the night to make preparations, such as adjusting the stove pipe, etc. before a fire could be made. The Dr. was sent for in due time but morning came and still no cause to get excited and I was more concerned about the boys being left on the farm than I was about myself so Dan went back to them and when he returned in the afternoon our baby girl had arrived, March 20, 1913. My dear old friend and pal Fan Walker came to my bedside and I asked her what would be a nice name for the baby, she said "Well, I think Phyllis is the nicest name I know". I liked the name myself and told Dr. Leonard to write it on the certificate. It was alright with Dan as it was my turn to select a name. I had asked for a girl which was only natural after having 4 boys. She was a lovely little thing, pretty as a picture, and we all made a pet of her, but she wasn't the baby very long.

Before she could walk alone another little girl came to be a companion and playmate for her. This time I stayed with Agnes Wood in Cedar, going there on the 1st of October, 1914. When Dr. Macfarlane announced the arrival of a baby girl on Oct. 5th we had the name of Mary Anne ready for her - and she looked like her Grandma Lunt for whom she was named - it is to be hoped she grows up to be as good a woman. Violet took care of Phyllis and helped her father at home. Ianthe was working in a printing office where Alex Rollo was editing a paper called the "Observer". While I was away from home Dan had a ceiling put on the living room which made it more comfortable for the approaching cold weather, but when Mary Anne was but a few weeks old both she and Phyllis contracted pneumonia and we did not realize they were so dangerously ill until we called Dr. Macfarlane. He said Phyllis was beginning to recover and had it not been that I had applied warm poultices to her chest thinking it was a bad cold, no telling what the result may have been. Having had dear Mother to help me in the care of the older children and never having had experience with pneumonia they had to suffer, but by following the Doctor's prescriptions and having faith in the administrations of the Elders they were healed.

Being located in a low part of the land, the surface water caused the ground to be damp or muddy most all of the time and we decided to move on the land which had been purchased by the Matheson Brothers from the state 2 miles north west of the Union Field, Moved in 1915. Dan had built a good substantial granary and that was moved first which we lived in while the house was being moved, the fireplace and chimney taken out but it was no easy matter to raise it up on wagons and pull it thru the brush and sand. The lean-to kitchen was detached and moved leaving one side open until we could get the house reassembled, but which was not done for several weeks, owing to so much other work needing to be done. We tacked carpet, canvas, etc. up on the open side of the kitchen which was some distance from the granary which served as a bedroom. We were anxious to get away from the mud, so we chose a sandy spot where large sage and rabbit brush had been grubbed out and burned but around which the sand had drifted leaving the ground uneven and which looked like a very undesirable place to make a home but we had our plans and had in mind a picture of how we wanted to make it look and worked to that end and were happy in our endeavors.

We moved in July, 1915 and a month or so later preparations were made for drilling a well, the Matheson Bros. having purchased a well drilling machine, in the meantime our culinary water was hauled from Esplin's 1/2 mile from our place. The crops were to be gathered, the stables, corrals, etc. moved and our living quarters made more comfortable before the approaching cold weather.

Dan was offered a job as engineer on a threshing machine which he was obliged to accept in order to increase our income but which hindered the progress in the home, the boys being too young to do much toward it. He had replaced the adobe lining in the house, also the foundation, but had not been able to build the chimney when the threshing started, so myself and the children put up the heating stove, using a window for the flue until one could be made. The kitchen was placed on logs and drawn alongside the house but a space about a foot wide between the two was left for the time being, in which the snow drifted, but regardless of this we were happy and as Christmas was drawing near the twins made candy and other preparations were made and a jolly time was had.

Our baby girl was now 9 months old and a joy and comfort to us all, good natured and just as happy as if surrounded with every luxury. Ianthe would sit on the side of the bed and play the guitar and sing for her and she no doubt thot she was in a most desirable place. The twins would care for their two little sisters like they were their mothers, while I would be busy with other duties. We gradually made ourselves more comfortable and the following spring the lot was leveled, fences made, trees and garden planted and the place began to look more like a home, a wooden water tank had been moved from the old farm in which the small stream from the well flowed and we were able to water about an acre of ground, the animals also having access to it. The 40 acres which had been designated as ours was some distance from the "building spot" we had selected and while it was being broken up we were allowed the use of several acres which had been plowed by Dan's brothers, which was planted in corn and potatoes. The land in the Union field being alfalfa and pasture, the boys would take our cows over in the morning and bring them back at night.

The 8th of July, 1917, Mabey was hurt, in a farm accident. Duayne ran over to Royce Nelson's, the nearest neighbors and he took both boys to the Cedar Hospital. They phoned to Dan who was working on George Esplin's house. George gave Dan his Ford car to drive to town, calling for me. I remember it was on a Saturday and I was at the time pressing Mabey's suit and preparing to send the children over to Enoch the next day. Albert came to the door with his head bowed and said "Mabey is badly hurt". Dan drove the car fast as he could but it seemed we were merely crawling. In the meantime dear Duayne was waiting in suspense and watching over his little darling brother, who didn't realize how badly he was hurt.

We tried to be calm as we realized what must be going on in each others minds. Drs. Leonard and Macfarlane operated that same night and we were hopeful for his recovery, we watched over him day and night for a week, and just as he began to take a tiny bit of nourishment and we were so encouraged he took suddenly worse and passed peacefully away on July 13, 1917. It was indeed a sad homecoming and as I write this 19 years later it is all brot vividly to my heart and mind and at the same time realize there are many things much more sad than death. Our many friends and relatives were very kind and a most wonderful funeral service was held.

My dear Brother Henry Lunt and Dan's brother Simon were the speakers [at the funeral] and they said how much better it was for Mabey to be called away in his purity than to go to war as so many were going at that time and being contaminated with the sins of the world. His father missed his climbing on his knee and one night as he was feeling unusually sad, he dreamed that he came to him and told him he was happy and for him not to be sad and down hearted, which was a comfort to us all. He was very religious for a boy of 11 years, he always memorized the Sunday school scripture or concert recitation and gave it the following Sunday. One Sunday not long before the accident, all the boys in the neighborhood were planning to go on a fishing trip, but he preferred to go to Sunday School walking over to Enoch, a distance of 3 miles, alone. As he left the house I said "Mabey will be our missionary" and he is. I hope we will all be worthy to meet him, and all be reunited as a happy family.

In Feb. 1918, Dan and I were called by Bro C.E. Jones from the Enoch Ward to fill a 2 week mission to the St George Temple and the day after we left Ianthe was offered a position in the Record Office[Iron County Record, newspaper], leaving Violet to care for the home and children. We stayed with our old friend, Lena Nelson and her Mother, only one temple session a day was held, after which we would roam the hills and surrounding country, enjoying every minute of our stay.

A school house was built on the Matheson Bros. property to accommodate the children in the valley and was designated as the Midvalley School, Mrs. Elsie Mendenhall being the first teacher. The school house also served as a recreation hall and many a social was had. A branch of the Enoch Ward Primary Association was organized, with myself as presiding officer. We moved our organ to the school house for the use of both the school and Primary. We had sold our Union Field farm and made an initial payment on a piano so left the organ at the school house. During the summer while we were attending Church in Enoch the lightning struck the school house and burned it to the ground. The old organ was gone and would no longer remind me of the past, from my childhood and the times when the family would gather round it and sing, and dear Florence would play and entertain us and the guests at the Old Hotel with her sweet voice, to the times when I held each one of my own children on my knee and played and sang for and with them. But we had a new Edison Phonograph which the twins had given us for our Christmas present while they were working in town, Violet at the Telephone office and Ianthe in the Printing Office.

During this time, Ianthe became acquainted with Seth Harper, who was employed as pianist at the Thorley Theatre and who would come and bring the girls out to our home and entertain us by playing the piano. He became a frequent visitor and in the summer of 1919, he took both girls to Ogden for a visit with his mother, who had lived there since immigrating from England when Seth was 14 years old, having joined the Church before leaving for America. Violet remained in Ogden, living with Sister Harper and being employed at Kearns Cafeteria. The following July, 1921, Seth and Ianthe were married in Salt Lake City. They lived in Cedar City for a few months before deciding to go to California where they both found employment, Seth in the musical line and Ianthe in a printing office and later as waiter in a cafeteria.

In the meantime Violet returned home and while there to take care of the younger children made it possible for me to take a few days trip to Salt Lake City, the first in 25 years. My brother, Will, and family were living there, he being in charge of the State Prison farm. I had an very interesting visit with them and old friends, my brother Oscar also living in Salt Lake City. I was taken to his home and visited places of interest in the city. There was a terrible rain storm flooding the streets and filling basements in the lower part of town. On our way home, we encountered deep snow at Cove Fort and south of there the mud was so deep the car was stalled and we had to wait until a team of horses from a farm could be brought to pull us out. Since then a new highway has been made and it is a common occurrence for motorists to go from Cedar to Salt Lake in 4 1/2 or 5 hours. I thot it was wonderful to go in 12 hours when I went with Mr. Judd and Mr Richards.

Before going to Ogden, Violet became acquainted with Ervin Stevens of Parowan, and they corresponded while away. On September 28, 1921, they were married in the St. George Temple, leaving for California soon after, where Ervin was employed in Imperial Valley. Violet being in San Diego part of the time with Ervin's Aunt, Mrs. Culver.

Seth and Ianthe had wished to return soon as possible to attend the Temple and there was great rejoicing when we received word that they were leaving for Utah. Father [Alice Maude refers to her husband Dan as father quite often from here on] and myself went to Lund [Utah] to meet them and learned that the train had been delayed on account of a strike, so we returned home greatly disappointed. They had checked their trunk, given up their apartment and were stranded, but the train pulled out the next day bringing them safely home. On August 29, 1922, they left for St. George accompanied by father and myself, going by way of LaVerkin Hot Springs where we bathed in the pool leaving there in the evening expecting to arrive in St. George at 7:30, but having trouble with our Ford we were on the road all night.

The weather was warm and it was a relief to be in the Temple the next day and partake of the peaceful influence and where it was cool compared to being out on the street. We stayed 3 days and enjoyed it, also our trip back home. Seth and Ianthe sealed in the Temple, Aug. 1922. Ervin and Violet had returned from California and were living across the road from our place. On September 7, 1922 Violet was taken to the hospital in Cedar where Alice Maude was born the same night, another great event in my life to see my first grandchild. It was a comfort to us all to have Ianthe at home for a few weeks to help take care of Violet and the baby, help with fruit and usual work at this time of year. She and Seth returned to California and soon after purchased a neat little home in Culver City the following spring, 1923, father went to California to work at the carpenter trade staying with them. The following August, 1923, he and Ianthe returned home the latter for a visit. The advent of the Railroad into Cedar had taken place the previous June and while there attending the big celebration, June 23, 1923, I was called to the bedside of my dear sister Eva, who had been sick for years and altho it is always hard to part with one of our loved ones it was a relief to us all and especially to her when she passed away from her suffering.

Violet and Ervin had moved to Parowan the previous fall and were living on the Day farms, Ianthe going to visit with her there. During his father's absence in California Albert took care of our farm, Duayne being away from home working most of the time. Will also helping at whatever he could do. We engaged the Halterman Bros. to drill a well, the old one being reduced to a very small stream. At 105 feet a stream measuring about 5 gallons per minute was brought to the surface, it would fill the old tank twice a day and we raised a splendid garden the following summer, receiving several prizes for vegetables at the County Fair.

In the spring of 1923 Dan purchased a team of horses at Salina, Prince and Joe, which became endeared to all the family, as they were noble intelligent horses and dependable. After selling the Union Field farm the year previous he had invested in a tractor but found that a good team of horses would serve our needs more satisfactorily, the tractor was sold at a sacrifice, but there was enough money left to pay for the drilling of the well, and soon after father's return from California he obtained work at Iron Springs where Columbia Steel Co. was installing machinery and constructing buildings and homes for the employees. He would be away all winter and I thot it would be best to rent a place in town, as the two little girls and myself would be alone most of the time and was anxious to have William attend Junior High School, there being no transportation and bad roads, we decided to rent our place to Ralph Adams who had been engaged to teach at the Midvalley School.

One day during the winter we received word that Prince had one of his feet badly cut in the barb wire fence. I will never forget how I felt as I thought it may have been avoided if we had stayed home. Albert went out as fast as he could and with Renz and Owen helped relieve the poor brute the best they could, but the foot was almost severed and he could not walk. For weeks he laid around and suffered. I was heart sick for him and prayed for his recovery, knowing how Dan would feel when he knew about it, as he thought so much of the horses. Old Prince was reduced to almost a skeleton but was finally able to walk but not to work for nearly a year and then not for long. It was nothing less than a tragedy to Dan and I when he had to be put out of his misery, poor old Joe seemed to mourn for his companion and his master tried to comfort him but he missed his mate and never did show the life and vigor he had exhibited.

While we were having our varied experiences at home, Ianthe was looking forward to my being with her the coming March when she expected the arrival of her first baby. Seth was conducting an orchestra in L.A. and she was alone most of the time. I left the boys to manage best they could while their father was away at work and a neighbor Emily Haight cared for the two little girls, Violet came from Parowan and stayed long as she could leave her home duties. Seth sent my railroad ticket and I arrived in L.A. the latter part of Feb., he and Ianthe meeting me at the train. As usual I was "sea sick" and it was several days before I recovered from the trip. Ianthe was anxious to see what my reaction would be to my first glimpse of the ocean, so that was the first place she took me. It was on a Sunday evening and as we sat on the Palisades at Santa Monica and watched the sun set on the ocean, it was a most spectacular view, the sun changing into different, odd shapes and casting a most gorgeous color over the water. I could watch and listen to the music of the waves for hours without tiring.

Ianthe felt well and was happy in having me with her and took a keen delight in taking me to the city and noticing the expressions of awe, admiration, delight or fear of so many things which were new to me. During my stay Seth purchased a Ford and we would start out early Sunday morning for a ride returning in time for Seth to go to the theatre in the city. While we were enjoying ourselves the folks at home were getting anxious for my return, and we were anxiously awaiting the arrival of the baby and all we could do was wait, which we did until the 24th of March, 1923 [1924?], when Shirley was born. I had been away from home a month and it wouldn't do for me to leave now. I stayed 3 more weeks and only a Mother can understand how hard it is to decide which of her children need her the most.

Seth and Ianthe took me to the depot in L.A. and I arrived in Lund next morning, a cold April wind blowing and snow on the ground. I waited there until the train left at 9 o'clock. The ride over the desert was a striking contrast to the land of sunshine and flowers I had left, there was no one to meet me at the station and as I walked thru a light coat of snow to our temporary home on 2nd East St. everything looked dismal and uninviting no one at home and the absence of a mother very much in evidence. We moved back to the farm in the Spring but as I am writing this narrative after a lapse of 12 years, I am omitting a great many incidents. A new ready-cut school house had been built on the Midvalley highway near our place, Dan overseeing the work, and Dan appointed Janitor after our return to the farm in 1923. In Nov. He contracted small pox from some unknown source and alto was quite sick for two or three days, it was a light case. We became suspicious at the appearance of a few spots on his face and called Dr MacFarlane. He pronounced it small pox and the two little girls were inoculated, fumigated and sent to our neighbor Sister Anderson's to stay. Will had been in the hospital for tonsil operation and the Dr. thot best not to vaccinate him so he and myself and his father were quarantined and I was the next to take the dread disease. It was anything but pleasant but compared to what I had heard of small pox and what a fatal disease it was, I was fortunate in escaping with a mere 300 eruptions on my body . In due time poor Bill had his turn, his face was swollen and covered with red blotches. Some of his cousins, Grace, Marja, and other girl friends came and saw him thru the window and guess they still remember what a sorry sight he was but we were fortunate in having a sense of humor and had many a good laugh and tried to amuse ourselves best we could. We were not very ill very long and it was a good opportunity to make rugs, read and clean house. Getting our release from quarantine on New Years Eve, it was great rejoicing when the girls could be at home. Fortunately no other cases developed and after the three of us being isolated for over two months including the Christmas holidays, 1924, we were glad to have our freedom again.

The next important event as I recall them was Duayne's marriage to Alice Walker, Feb. 2, 1926, daughter of William V. and Jannett Walker. They had become acquainted during the previous summer while Duayne was working with a company of surveyors and boarding in Cedar. We were surprised one day in March [?] when Duayne came out home and informed us that he and Alice were to be married soon. They had rented an apartment and were making preparations to keep house. Alice's mother, Aunt Violet Urie, and myself accompanied them to the St. George Temple and all enjoyed the trip. A reception was given them at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bulloch, a sister of the bride. A large crowd of relatives and friends of both Duayne and Alice were in attendance and they received many beautiful and useful gifts.

During the following summer, 1937, I accepted a position as cook in the Iron County Hospital, taking Aunt Lottie Perkins place while she took a trip to California expecting to be gone 3 weeks but she decided to remain for the winter and I stayed at the hospital 8 months, taking Phyllis to room with me and attend Junior High School. Mary Anne staying at home with her father and attending the Midvalley School. One morning as I was busy in the kitchen Bill came in to say he was going to California with John Maxwell. I had hoped he would remain at Cedar and attend school and tried to persuade him to do so but he had some get-rich-quick ideas and was bent on adventure and as he has said since, it would have been a waste of time had he attended school while in that state of mind, but can see the need of at least a high school education before going out expecting to find much beside hard knocks and being obliged to take a much longer course in the school of experience.

That same winter, 1926, my dear brother Henry was confined to his bed, and it was a regret that I could not see him often, my time being so occupied, but on learning he was becoming weaker every day I went to see him and it was a satisfaction when he recognized and spoke to me. This was on Christmas day and the next day Dec. 26, 1926 we received the sad news that he had passed away. He had been a prominent man in Cedar had held the position as State Senator, State Road Commissioner, was Bishop of the East Ward in Cedar and occupied many other prominent positions, and had endeared himself into the hearts of the people. His funeral services were very impressive and the largest attendance of any in Cedar. President Grant was one of the speakers. Also the present Governor Henry H. Blood, who was at that time a road commissioner and had worked with and had a high regard for Henry. His wife and 10 fine children still survive him. Harry, who is loved and respected by all being the oldest is now 50 years old. I have always had a warm spot in my heart for him (Harry) since I cared for him when I was 10 years old.

I stayed at the hospital until March when I again went to California to be with Ianthe when Edith was born Mar. 15, 1927. Phyllis stayed with Duayne and Alice during my absence. I took care of Shirley and kept house for Seth while Ianthe was in the Santa Monica hospital, but only stayed with her a short time after her return home. Bill was also there but was now working in Beverly Hills and came down on Sunday and took me up to the station. We were late for the evening train and while waiting for the next, went to a show [movie?], on coming out there was a downpour of rain and we presented a sorry sight as we crouched by the side of a building, a cold wind blowing, Bill with a bad cold and uncertain prospects for work and no money to return home and I felt anything but elated at leaving him under the circumstances. Quoting from a book I read recently, "There's no one but spends half his life undoing the things he does in the other half and most of us are so divided between hope and regret, that we've no heart left to be enjoying what we have." But I will add that there are times when we feel there is nothing to enjoy and at such times it takes courage and determination to go on and again quoting from Harold Bill Wright in "The Recreation of Brian Kent" - "No matter how tangled and confused life seems to be, it will all come straight at the last, if, like the river, we only keep going on."

In looking back over the years as I write this, I see so many mistakes that I have made that it takes the joy out of the writing of this narrative, but I must keep on and finish now to make my story complete and hope that it will have a happy ending.

On the 12th of May, 1927, a baby boy, Kenneth, was born to Duayne and Alice and I took care of the mother and babe after their return from the hospital. The following June I took Phyllis and Mary with 13 other girls to Provo to pick strawberries which was a new experience for us all. It was a responsibility for me to chaperone them and regardless of the rain and having to work in the wet ground on their knees most of the time, they would enjoy the evenings after cleaning up and going for a walk or to a dance or just staying in our bunk house and sing songs to the accompaniment of Naami Barnson's ukelele.

After returning home on the 1st of July, 1927, Phyllis obtained work at Mary Sandwich Shop and Mary assisted me in putting up fruit at the hospital. Mary was now ready for Junior High School and Phyllis for the B.A.C. [Branch Agricultural College. At that time the B.A.C. included both high school and college]. I applied for the position as cook for the dormitory girls at the college, they had converted the upper floor of the mechanics building into rooms for the girls, having the use of the dining room and kitchen in the science building. Our girls helped in the kitchen for their board and we rented rooms at Tolstrups on the opposite street. I stayed at my job until Feb. when I was compelled to give it up, having an acute attack of lumbago. I was confined to my room for 5 weeks and never before had suffered such severe pain. Dan had been called on a short home mission but gave it up and waited on me, only leaving long enough to go out to the farm to look after affairs there. Soon as I could be moved, I was taken to Parowan where I visited with Violet for a week before going home.

I was more of an invalid than had ever been as phlebitis had developed in my left leg which made it difficult for me to walk but Dan made an excellent nurse. He was janitor for the Midvalley School Room, Marian Luke being the teacher. They were making preparations for a "Rural School Teachers Convention" and on the day of the big event, Marian sent me an invitation to be present. As it was still difficult for me to walk she sent Mr. Luke for me in his car. On entering the school house Dan drew my attention to the blackboard where samples of letters had been written by the students, demonstrating their ability in writing to the assembled teachers. To my surprise I noticed they were all addressed to "Aunt Maude". I had also noticed a beautiful Easter lily plant with several full bloom lilies and buds which I supposed had been brought from the florist for the occasion. In reading the letters each child had expressed their delight in contributing toward the purchase of the plant and that it was being presented to Aunt Maude as a token of their appreciation of her having helped them in their school work during the time we held Primary and taught them songs, etc. It was a great surprise to me and I felt highly honored as there is no greater satisfaction than to have the love and respect of the children with whom we associate.

The following winter Lillie Jones was our school teacher and boarded with us. Mary going to Cedar on the bus. Phyllis rooming at the dormitory and working at Mary's Cafe, but she could not do justice to her studies and as the winter advanced it became more difficult to keep both girls provided with the necessary funds for their school work. After the Holidays I decided to take Phyllis to California where the tuition and books were free and Mary remained with her father and continued school at the Junior High, Albert and Bill were both in California and I thot by procuring work myself it would solve the problem of Phyllis going on with her business course. I could keep house for the 4 of us, but the "Best laid plans of mice and men gang aft alee", says Robert Burns. I stayed with Ianthe for a month before securing a position as housekeeper for Mrs. Saule at Lark Ellen Circle, a beautiful location 2 or 3 miles from Ianthe's home. The boys had been running a lunch shop on Washn. Blvd. but were not working and living in Beverly Hills. Phyllis was keeping house for a lady in Cheveot Hills but we would see each other occasionally and as I had Sunday and Thursday off, I would spend the time with Ianthe and family. They would call for me on the way to the Mar Vista Church.

In the spring after the closing of school, Mary came down, having graduated from the Junior High in Cedar, she also was employed in a home in Culver City. During the summer, 1929, the boys work took them into L.A. and we decided to rent a place in the city and all live together, Phyllis secured work in a B&Y Sandwich Shop in the City. Mary attended school and I kept house for them all. We had some happy times, but it was also a worry to keep up with the expenses.

In the meantime father was having troubles at home being sick occasionally with kidney and bladder trouble. Mary at the same time developing a cough which may develop into serious complications. We took her to a clinic several times and the only solution to the problem was to take her to a higher climate. It seemed that we had complicated matters in going to California. Bill was renewing his friendship with Vera Littlely who he had met on the bus a year before on his way to Utah and who had also returned to L.A. and was employed as bookkeeper in Walkers Store. Albert had his lady friend, Ivy Grantham, who would call for him in her car and who was a frequent visitor. Phyllis and Mary had their boyfriends and it kept Mother wondering how everything would turn out. We all belonged to the Wilshire Ward and enjoyed attending Church as often as we could. Mary's condition did not improve and it didn't take me long to decide what to do when we received word from Duayne that his father had been taken to Cedar to the doctor. I packed up immediately and Bill brot Mary and I home, leaving L.A. on the evening of my birthday, Dec. 18, 1830, arriving home next day after going 100 miles out of the way thru taking a detour. Duayne had taken his father home, the latter insisting that he would be able to take care of himself until our arrival, he was weak from his suffering while under the Dr's care, but able to be around and seemed much better. But we had brot citrus fruits which he enjoyed but made the mistake of using sugar with them which aggravated his weak condition.

The second morning after our arrival, Sunday, Mary and I were resting being tired from our trip, when we heard father call to me in a most terrified voice, and after running down the stairs found him in a state of collapse, we called to Evan who was out by our well and he ran for his father who phoned for a doctor. Dan was taken to the hospital where he remained for 3 days, when he was taken to Duayne's home where he spent Christmas day. We returned home and after both Dan's and Mary's health improved the latter attended school at the

B.A.C. until it closed when she was employed as waitress in the Escalante Hotel.

I accepted a position in the Cedar Laundry - ironing shirts. Commencing on the first of May, 1931. Before this, however, while on a visit with Violet and Ervin in April in Gunnison, where they were living, we received a telegram from Bill announcing his marriage to Vera Littlely. Also that he was leaving California next day to come and help Ervin on the farm. Vera remained keeping her position in the store. Albert had gone to Seattle Washington and was working for a poultry company. Phyllis was working part time and attending a business college which enabled her to secure work as stenographer in a lawyers office later on and in May paid us a visit. While in Cedar at that time, the dormitory building was burned, she being one of the first to dash upstairs and help the girls carry out some of their clothing and belongings. Bill returned to California and in the meantime Albert had returned home. He was employed driving truck to Zion [National Park] for the Standard Oil Company. He would take me to my work in town and back at night after his return and as the road north of Cedar was being built, making it hard to travel, we decided to rent an apartment in town. Dan's health had improved but his old trouble of hay fever and asthma returned making life miserable for him. While at the Stevens Apartment house, Ivy and girlfriend came from California and took Mary and I on a trip to Grand Canyon, Bryce, and back by way of Cedar Breaks. Ivy and Mary taking turns driving the car.

It was our first trip to the Grand Canyon and we were thrilled and awe stricken with the vastness of it all, from the Kaibab forest to the Canyon and the wonderful lodge which was later burned to the ground. We were glad to have had the privilege of seeing it before it met with such an awful and sad fate. While the girls were enjoying the dance in the Lodge after having listened to a most wonderful program and entertainment given by the employees, who consisted of talented young people from different parts of the country. I heard the click of the Telegraph key, it was music to my ears, and attracted my attention from the dance. The operator invited me into the office and gave me the opportunity of taking down what I could of a message or night letter she was sending to Salt Lake City, I was agreeably surprised to find that I had written the most part of it, the first I had received since abandoning the Western Union Office in Cedar 30 years ago.

In the fall, Dan returned home to resume his duties as Janitor. Mary and I had a room at Duayne's, she was attending school and I took care of Glen MacFarlane's invalid wife and two little girls for a few weeks, being home only a short time before going to keep house for Duanye and his two boys, Kenneth and Paul while Alice was in the Hospital, another boy, Roger, being born on Nov. 3, 1931. It necessitated my leaving Dan alone again, but he was always capable of keeping house and taking care of himself when other duties called me away.

During this time, 1931, Mary and Bill Dalton, who was attending the B.A.C. had decided to be married and continue school, going to Parowan in the spring to live in his father's home, his mother, Maude Mitchel Dalton, being an old friend of mine. We arrived at the time that had looked so far in the distance, when our baby girl would leave us to make a home of her own but "Time marches on" and I am again making an attempt to resume my story or narrative or what have I or you ?

It is now July 24th, 1936. Dan and I are in St. George where we came last October to work in the Temple. Many events have taken place during the last 5 years. Albert's marriage to Helen White, June 23, 1934, being one of the important ones. The birth of Bill and Vera's two babies, Carol Ann and Claudia and Mary's two boys, Billie and Malcolm. Another boy being added to Violet's family, a girl to Duayne's and a boy to Albert and Helen, the last which I am sorry to relate died at birth. (See dates of births in family record sheets) In Nov. 1934 Dan was taken sick and the Dr. advised the removal of a stone from the kidney but he objected to an operation, he suffered pain at intervals and was finally unable to attend to the Janitor work. An abscess was forming in the region of his hip bone altho we did not know at the time what was causing the swelling and as the pain increased and it was necessary to give him opiates and still he refused to go to the hospital, we relied on the power of the Priesthood which he had the faith would heal him. On several occasions he became so weak and exhausted from the continued pain and not having any appetite or being able to sleep without a drug, it seemed all he would need to do was close his eyes and he would be gone, but he whispered to me to pray for him which I did and he would revive, and be able to walk about the house again. I had written to Phyllis about her father's condition and she obtained a leave of absence and came from California and stayed with us 2 weeks. While at home she was a great comfort to us and on her return to California purchased material for the wiring and installing of the electric lights in our home. Duayne and Albert doing the work and having it ready for the power to be turned on Christmas eve, 1935.

We did appreciate this as we had so many visitors. Bishop Armstrong and others would come and hold prayer circle and on several occasions spend an evening singing, cheering and encouraging us. I should mention Bishop Armstrong and wife, Myron Jones and wife, Bishop's counselors, Stanley Smith and Grace Urie Williams and Ivy - Dolph Grimshaw and Stella and others who sang so beautifully to the accompaniment of Grace's guitar. It seemed to us we had never heard the hymns and old songs sound so good. Duayne would come out often as he could and bring some of the good men from Cedar to administer to his father. Bishop Frank Wood and counselors William Adams, George Grimshaw, Harry Lunt and William V. Walker and others. They would always cheer us up and leave a blessing. Violet and Ervin were now living near, which was a comfort to have some of our children near us. Owen and Renz would call often and we did appreciate our many friends.

After weeks of suffering the abscess broke leaving an open drainage from his side, and other than the inconvenience of it, Dan gradually regained his strength and we began planning on coming to St. George to spend the winter. The children were all anxious to help and arrangements were made. The Enoch Ward tendered us a social party in the Relief Society room, the Bishop giving us some money on our departure.

Mary had been down from Parowan often as she could and was anxious to bring us down to St. George where I had been on the 12th of Sept., 1935, to engage a room. I omitted relating the death of my dear brother, Will, on the 2nd of Feb. 1930 in Salt Lake City, where he had moved several years before to take treatment for a cancerous growth on his face, thru which his life was prolonged for several years during which he was never idle, being ambitious and always a hard worker. The disease finally got the upper hand and he was compelled to give up. During his last illness I spent a week helping wait on him. He suffered agonies but was bright and cheerful and appreciated my visit and I was glad to have been with him as soon after going to California I was informed of his death, his funeral was held in Salt Lake City, where also interment in the City Cemetery. My oldest sister, Henrietta died 2 years after my return home after a long illness. Also Uncle Jed Jones, Eva's husband, whom everyone loved and respected. Uncle Lehi still living and active at the age of 81 being the Pres. of the Bank of So. Utah at this time, 1936. I will now begin on a diary from the time we arrived in St. George, Oct. 17, 1935.

They are left alone in the dear old home
After so many years
When the house was full of frolic and fun
Of childish laughter and tears.
They are left alone, they two once more,
Beginning life over again,
Just as they did in the days of yore,
Before they were nine or ten.

And the table is set for two these days,
The children went one by one,
Away from home on their separate ways,
When the childhood days were done.

How healthily hungry they used to be,
What romping they used to do,
And mother through weeping can hardly see
To set the table for two.

They used to gather around the fire
While someone would read aloud,
But whether at study or work or play.
'Twas a loving and merry crowd.
And now they are two that gather there
At evening to read or sew,
And it seems almost too much to bear
When they think of the long ago.

Ah, well---ah, well---'tis the way of the world
Children stay but a little while,
And then into other scenes are whirled
Where other homes beguile.
But it matters not how far they roam,
Their hearts are fond and true,
And there's never a home like the dear old home
Where the table is set for two.

Mrs. Frank A.

Breck

After the children were all married we spent the best part of several years in St. George at the Temple. In the summer months as employees of the Union Pacific Parks [Mostly at the Lodge at Bryce Canyon National Park] My husband had suffered with asthma and other complications and finally became so ill we moved back to Cedar.

December 25, 1953. Well, this would have been the best Christmas for a long time if Dan had been well enough to enjoy it, we brought him in the front room where the folks were, but he got tired and had to go back to his room.

Dec. 27, 1953. The twins 55th birthday anniversary, we would love to see them, but their dear father is in so much pain it makes me grieve to see him suffer. Duayne is here and on the Doctor's advice he gave his father more pain medicine. which eased him and he apparently slept and seemed at ease for 12 hours. Duayne and Bill put in a hospital bed and Alice came over to help make him comfortable but he didn't seem to realize what we were doing and yet I could see he was suffering and yet not a word did he utter. We watched over him for two days, while he seemed to be asleep and resting. It was beyond our power to help him and our Heavenly Father in his mercy took him from his suffering condition. But we were thankful he went in peace without a complaint or a struggle, Tuesday night at 10:30, December 29, 1953.[Age 79] Altho he had faith he would get better, the Dr.

said there were no hopes, but he had a desire to preach the Gospel and am sure he is having that privilege now in the spirit world. All I can do now is prepare myself to meet him as it will take me a long time to learn as much about the principles of the Gospel as he knew.

Phyllis felt an urge to come to see her father and took a plane and arrived a few hours after his passing. I will never forget our sorrow and her disappointment in seeing his empty room. Altho I could see he could not recover, I was not prepared for it. Phyllis was a comfort to me coming when she did and the other three girls, Ianthe, Violet and Ervin, Mary and Bill arrived in time for the funeral services, also Lucile and Mary's Linda and Becky.

So many callers to see me and extend their love, sympathy, and assistance. Our children all here together, the first time in many years. Seven to be exact, as I recall they were here for our 50th Wedding Anniversary. The funeral services, Jan. 2nd, 1954, were all we could desire, many beautiful flowers, at the mortuary preceding the services, 300 people, all friends of ours, signed the register. Father looked beautiful, young and such a pleasant expression showing he was happy being released from his suffering and misery.

Phyllis took down the minutes of the services in detail which will be on record for the grand and great-grand children to read. Father expressed being so thankful and appreciative of his family many times, and we both missed being with them more and having them and the grandchildren hear and being better acquainted.

January 10, 1954. I find myself in the position that have been praying that I would be able to face with courage and fortitude. I am alone and yet not alone. I woke up with a start as I heard my name called out, sat up in bed and answered, I was not frightened and my prayers have been answered in that I have not felt alone. I saw Dan in a dream and he was happy, which I knew he would be and know he would want me to be. I am not happy in the same way that when we were together and well, but will wait patiently until that will be the case again, but happy in the fact that we have that knowledge of being together again in so much better circumstances.

1960. I am now comfortable located in a cottage near the chapel where I can attend Church, and hope to be able to take care of myself for a few more years. Duayne, Alice and one of their 6 children the only ones living here in Cedar, Albert and Helen in Summit [Utah], the others all in homes of their own, in different parts of the country.

They have always been a great comfort and blessing to us and my prayers are that they will always be true to the faith and be proud of their heritage.

On Sunday, March 25, 1962, Grandma suffered a stroke. Her whole left side was paralyzed and she couldn't talk very well. She was never able to walk or take care of herself again. She pretty much spent the rest of her life bedridden. Grandma was in a care center for a month, then spent the final months of her life at our house, the home of Duayne and Alice Matheson. Mom was a professional nurse's aid and took wonderful care of her Mother in Law.

On September 14, 1962, Alice Maude Lunt Matheson was finally able to pass away. I felt bad, but I felt worse during the five and a half months before her death. Seeing her in the condition she was in day after day was heart breaking.

It has been a delight for me to type Grandma's history and to read again about her life and the lives of the many other relatives that she tells about. I hope that you have enjoyed reading this too.

I loved my Grandma and am proud to be one of her grandchildren.

As you may have noticed, there is a gap of almost 20 years, from 1935 to 1953. If anyone has anything that Grandma wrote about those years I would be interested.
